

Tenet Adds Free Bookkeeping Automation Software for SMEs and Bookkeepers as Part of Cubeler Business Hub Offering

Toronto, Ontario--(Newsfile Corp. - December 2, 2024) - Tenet Fintech Group Inc. (CSE: PKK) (OTCQB: PKKFF) ("Tenet" or the "Company"), an innovative analytics service provider, owner and operator of the Cubeler® Business Hub, today announced that it has added free bookkeeping automation software for bookkeepers and small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) as part of its offering on the Cubeler® Business Hub platform.

In addition to benefiting from the networking, advertising, insights and financing services provided on the Business Hub, SME owners who register their businesses and bookkeeping service providers who cause their SME clients to register and share their data with the platform are now eligible to receive a license of Dext Software Ltd.'s bookkeeping automation platform. The Company believes that the new offer, prominently featured on the Cubeler.com website (<https://www.cubeler.com/en-ca/cubeler-and-free-dext-access-offer>), will allow it to work with both its existing and future bookkeeping service provider partners to speed up the registration of SMEs on the Business Hub over the last month of 2024.

"We've been working very hard, particularly since the addition of the Business Hub's new modules, both internally and with our external partners, on everything required to commercialize our first ie-Pulse macroeconomic index data plans prior to the end of 2024," commented Tenet CEO Johnson Joseph. "While the development of the ie-Pulse platform is expected to be ready for that to happen, we need to ensure that we have enough SME data in at least one industrial sector, such as retail for example, if the ie-Pulse Canadian Retail series of indexes are going to be effective in helping clients gauge the state of the Canadian retail industry. Based on the discussions we've had with our bookkeeping service provider partners, we believe the offer announced today will go a long way in helping us achieve that objective."
