

CHROMEDX ENGAGES POLYGENESIS CORPORATION FOR COMPLETION OF HEMOPALM™ ALPHA

TORONTO, ONTARIO -- (September 2, 2015) - ChroMedX Corp. (the “Company”) (CSE: CHX, OTC: MNLIF, Frankfurt: EIY2), a developer of in vitro diagnostics and point-of-care testing (POCT) is pleased to announce the engagement of technology development and prototyping firm Polygenesis Corporation to continue the development of the HemoPalm™ biosensor array, a fundamental component of the HemoPalm™ system.

Polygenesis will build on the initial work carried out by Aline Inc. and complete the development of the biosensor array and associated electronics. In addition Polygenesis will be responsible for the development of the alpha prototype of the HemoPalm™ system.

Polygenesis Corporation is led by Henry Wieck Ph.D. Dr. Wieck had previously been a senior executive with POCT device manufacturer i-STAT during that company’s early development and commercialization phase. Later i-STAT was acquired by Abbott.

“At i-STAT Dr. Wieck’s expertise in electrochemistry was instrumental in the development of i-STAT’s biosensor system. This world leading expertise is now being engaged in the development of ChroMedX’s new biosensor technology”, said Dr. Wayne Maddever, President & CEO, ChroMedX Corp.

“We are pleased to be involved with ChroMedX and its novel HemoPalm™ technology development. The combination of spectroscopic and biosensor measurement techniques promises to offer significant improvements over current POC devices. Polygenesis prides itself in its ability to tangibilize new products such as the HemoPalm™ as the first step in the commercialization process”, said Dr. Henry Wieck, President of Polygenesis Corporation.
