AMP Round Table Series, Episode #2: "Politics and Medical Cannabis in Germany"

Medical cannabis has been an important political issue even before Germany legalized its use three years ago and is becoming even more relevant in current politics.

The majority of the political parties in Germany are in agreement that medical cannabis has a role in benefiting some medical conditions. However, German politicians and the public would agree that policies enacted since legalization have room for improvement. Open issues like patient access, medical conditions covered, guaranteed health insurance coverage for medical cannabis prescriptions and sources of supply still need to be addressed.

In AMP Round Table Episode #2, Dr. Wieland Schinnenburg, MdB, spokesman for drug and addiction policy of the Free Democratic Party (FDP) and a well-respected medical cannabis expert joins Dr. Stefan Feuerstein to discuss the politics of medical cannabis as well as the opportunities and challenges facing medical cannabis companies like AMP.

Dr. Schinnenburg will discuss how the government will address the aforementioned issues in the near future in addition to:

Summary of Topics Discussed

- How do the political parties' views differ on medical cannabis in Germany?
- How do the German federal government and the sixteen German states view medical cannabis?
- Can supplying the growing demand for medical cannabis in Germany be better managed?
- What can be learned from the first domestic cultivation tender in regard to how the process was conducted and in meeting the growing demand for medical cannabis?
- What role can imported medical cannabis play in meeting the current and growing demand for medical cannabis?
- Could an increase in imported medical cannabis improve competition in Germany and lower prices to health insurance companies and private patients?
- How are policies at the Cannabis Agency at German's Federal Institute for Drugs and Medical Devices (BfRaM) being made?
- How will the medical cannabis industry develop in Germany over the next five to ten years from now?
