The B.C Medical Journal reports an evolving crisis in B.C.'s primary health care indicating that 17.7% of B.C residents lacked a health care provider due to staff shortages. The situation in the B.C. capital reports that an estimated 100,000 residents lack a family physician. Burnout and lack of adequate compensation are one of the many reasons reported for a shortage of health care professionals. Concierge's mission is to fill the gap and provide health care professionals to those who need it. (Source: The evolving crisis in primary care | British Columbia Medical Journal \(bcmj.org\))

"With private health care on the rise as the public sector faces demand, our team of board-certified physicians and registered nurses are prepared to service the community. Management is confident that continued growth is expected for our medical division and look forward to expanding Concierge to help improve the lives of our community," said Lena Kozovski, CEO of the Company.
