RECENT ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENTS

In December 2019, a novel strain of coronavirus surfaced in China. By March 11, 2020, the Coronavirus disease (COVID-19) had spread to over 100 countries. On January 30, 2020, the World Health Organization declared the COVID-19 outbreak a Public Health Emergency of International Concern and, on March 10, 2020, declared it to be a pandemic. Actions taken around the world to help mitigate the spread of COVID-19 include restrictions on travel, quarantines in certain areas, and forced closures for certain types of public places and businesses. These measures have caused and will continue to cause significant disruption to business operations and a significant increase in economic uncertainty, with reduced demand for commodities leading to volatile prices and currency exchange rates, and a decline in long-term interest rates. The speed and extent of the spread of COVID-19, the duration and intensity of the resulting business disruption, and the magnitude of the financial and social impacts are uncertain and difficult to predict.

COVID-19 and the measures taken by governments and companies to reduce its spread may have an adverse impact on many aspects of the Company's business. Increased capital market and interest rate volatility may negatively affect the Company's ability to access external financing. Whether and to what extent the recent market volatility and COVID-19 outbreak will impact the Company's business will depend on future developments which, at this time, remain uncertain and difficult to predict.

GOING CONCERN

The assessment of the Company's ability to continue as a going concern and ability to fund potential technology development project, involves significant judgments based on historical experience and other factors including expectation of future events that are believed to be reasonable under the circumstances.

The Company's business involves a high degree of risk and there can be no assurance that current development activity will ultimately result in profitable operations. The Company's continued existence is dependent upon its ability to secure future customers and the achievement of profitable operations, or the ability of the Company to raise additional financing.

These consolidated financial statements have been prepared on a basis which assumes the Company will continue to operate for the foreseeable future and will be able to realize its assets and discharge its liabilities in the normal course of operations. In assessing whether this assumption is appropriate, management takes into account all available information about the future, which is at least, but not limited to, twelve months from the end of the reporting period. This assessment is based upon planned actions that may or may not occur for a number of reasons including the Company's own resources and external market conditions.

The Company will require additional financing, through various means including but not limited to equity financing, to continue to pursue the development of technology, and to meet its general and administrative costs. There is no assurance that the Company will be successful in raising the additional required funds. These conditions represent a material uncertainty that may cast significant doubt regarding the Company's ability to continue as a going concern. In the event that Company is not able to secure additional financing and continue as a going concern, material adjustments would be required to the carrying value of assets and liabilities and the balance sheet classification used.
