“As our business has rapidly matured and we have built the scale and footprint to become a leading multi-state operator, this is the right time to simplify our capitalization table for the benefit of existing and new shareholders,” said James Cacioppo, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Jushi Holdings Inc. “Institutional capital is increasingly evaluating investment opportunities in the legal cannabis market ahead of potential federal legalization. To facilitate their investment, we are taking the appropriate steps now to become a U.S. registered filer, which will enable us to uplist to a major U.S. exchange upon acceptance.”

Mr. Cacioppo added, “We continue to aspire to lead the cannabis industry and a critical component of doing so is implementing the environmental, social, and governance (“ESG”) principles that will guide our business. Our decision to retire our previous super and multiple voting share classes brings us in line with industry best practice and is a clear signal to our shareholders of our commitment to strong governance.”
