MedX reports that it has now collected more than 400 complete reference records and is on track to reach its Phase 2 target of 500 fully-completed reference records by June 30, 2021. Completion of Phase 2 will allow for further system calibration and the generation of primary age group/gender baselines. The Phase 3 target of 800 reference records is expected by the end of August, whereafter the baselines and calibrations may be further refined in advance of the final record collection Phase, calibration, and general system release.

Jim Durward, President, states: "We recently increased our collection efforts and at our current accelerated rate we expect to reach our release target by December, 2021. Continuing tight cost controls are keeping project costs under budget."
